Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

TEXTILE mill employees who only recently were out on strike announce today they are lining up squarely behind the textile mill owners in their demand that the processing tax on cotton be repealed. At the same time we note that cotton farmers are holding a mass meeting at Prescott and elsewhere to sustain the processing tax. Here is just one more battle in the ceaseless war between industry and agriculture for political control—and unless agriculture presents a united front agriculture will go down to defeat in that struggle, just as it has been whipped so many times before.

Die, Many Hurt in New Highway Accidents in U. S.

The main issue, of course, is whether we are going to continue the processing tax and the AAA cotton benefit payments which the processing tax supports.

Stiebel said, "Gibson is the same fellow who was sentenced in federal court several months ago in connection with the handling of stolen bonds."

A "Political Power"

POCAHONTAS, Ark.—Gibson long has been a political power in Lawrence county. He was president of the Bank of Hoxie which he removed to Walnut Ridge a few years ago.

Dame's confession was made in Little Rock after he had been questioned by Maj. James A. Pittcock, chief of detectives of the Little Rock Police Department.

All cotton producers in Nevada county are urged to be present at a meeting in Prescott, Saturday, May 4, at the courthouse at 10 o'clock, for the purpose of discussing the continuation of the cotton program.

"Cotton farmers of the South are up against the stiffest fight that has ever been made in congress on any bill," according to the committee, J. W. Bryson, J. H. Harrison, Pat Cross.

"We feel that unless we can influence our congressmen and senators the processing tax will be killed."

"The President states positively that unless we have control programs beyond 1935 there will be no loans on cotton. We feel that unless the Bankhead Act is continued in 1936 there will very likely not be any loans made in 1935."

Senate Committee Refuses Two-Year Extension of NRA

Administration's Wish Overridden—One-Year Extension Okehed

INTERSTATE ONLY

New Works Division to Move People Out of Unprofitable Areas

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The senate finance committee Wednesday disregarded the administration's recommendation for a two-year extension of the NRA and voted to continue the present law, with three changes, until April 1 next year.

The committee voted 16 to 3 to report out a resolution extending the present law with a prohibition against price-fixing, and the limitation of codes to interstate business.

To a Better Home

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Roosevelt announced Wednesday an executive order establishing a Rural Re-Settlement division to aid in the administering of the 4-billion-dollar works program.

The new division, charged with moving people from unprofitable communities to places where they can live better, will be headed by Undersecretary of Agriculture Tugwell.

Roosevelt also said he had asked Morris Llewellyn Cooke, of Philadelphia, to set up the Rural Electrification division.

White-Collar Work

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Work relief officials drafted a three-point program Wednesday in an attempt to provide "suitable" employment for a large percentage of the 750,000 "white-collar" people now on relief rolls.

Officials said this program revolves around research, education and recreation.

Battle Over NRA

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Eight months, instead of two years more life for a Blue Eagle with shorter claws Tuesday became the object of a powerful bi-partisan drive that developed out of a discordant White House conference.

The proposal to make two modifications of the NRA and extend it for eight months gained swift headway at the capitol after complete collapse of negotiations between President Roosevelt and congressional leaders for a compromise. Leaders of the move predicted the chief executive would acquiesce.

Under the suggested plan, NRA would be extended until next March, with its price-fixing and intra-state regulation powers eliminated. Congress could then revise the law next session on the basis of court decisions as to its constitutionality.

Acceptance Foreseen

One of the senators who participated in the suddenly arranged White House conference quoted the president as saying:

"I'll have to sign whatever you fellows send to me."

Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, one of the participants in the conference, immediately sent telegrams to his constituents telling them if they were engaged in purely intra-state business they could ignore NRA because the federal government had no power to interfere with them. He told them to advise him if the government sought to interfere.

Meanwhile, the Supreme Court received a brief from attorneys for the Schechter Poultry Corporation of Brooklyn, Donald R. Riehlberg, NRA head, was expected to reply for the government Wednesday, with arguments starting Thursday on constitutionality of the NRA.

The merchandise was recovered by Homestead and Howard county officers on the banks of the Little river near the Sevier county line Tuesday night, and the alleged robbers will be arrested in Oklahoma possibly Wednesday, the sheriff said.

He expressed appreciation for the cooperation of Sheriff Clarence Dilly of Howard county, and Town Marshal Fred Ball, of Nashville.

Cat Bite As Perilous As Dog's Or Rat's

We all know what to do when a mad dog bites a person. But we should realize also that a mad cat or a mad rat can do as much harm as the dog. For some time it has been known that the bite of the rat, and occasionally the bite of the cat, may infect the human being with certain germs and that these germs, once established in the body, produce a disease known as rat bite fever.

The disease was particularly frequent during the World War among soldiers in the trenches, and quite recently a considerable number of cases were reported from London among workers in sewers who became contaminated with the excretions of rats or who occasionally suffered the bites of rats.

Very rarely does this disease come to the human being from the bite of a cat. But two doctors recently reported a case in which the infection was transmitted in this manner.

A girl, 14 years old, noticed a cat which was caught in a trap in a garage. The trap had been set for rats. The stray cat bit the girls on the back of her bare right leg just above the ankle. The wound was washed immediately, painted with iodine and bandaged. But 10 days later the leg began to swell, then lumps appeared, indicating that the glands were infected.

The girl also developed some destruction of her red blood cells with anemia and a considerable increase in her white blood cells, due to the infection. She had periodic attacks of fever and broke out with a rash typical of this condition.

After treatment with the arsenical remedies used to overcome rat bite fever, she gradually recovered.

Attempts were made to find the germ that caused rat bite fever in her blood, but these were unsuccessful.

Nevertheless, this case indicates again the dangers of infection from the bites of animals and the importance of having proper scientific medical care whenever a human being is bitten.

How Death Brought Lovers Fulfillment—'Forever' Is Tender Fantasy of Delicate Beauty

"Forever," by Mildred Cram, is one of those delicate and tender fantasies which must be the hardest of all stories to write, because one poorly chosen phrase can spoil the whole thing.

What Miss Cram does is simply to reverse our customary outlook on life and death. In her story, human existence beyond the grave is the important thing, and life on earth is a mere incident.

Her people exist in a magic shadowland beyond time and space. From time to time they must be born into human bodies, on earth—and they fear birth precisely as we ourselves fear death.

She introduces a boy and a girl—ageless and eternally young, who roam the earth with all the other disembodied spirits, and to whom actual flesh-and-blood people are as invisible and as mysterious as ghosts are to us.

They fall in love, these two, and then they have to be born into earthly bodies; and they are separated by the mystery of birth as earthly lovers are separated by the mystery of death, and like them they vow to find each other, somehow.

Their earthly existence is one long hunt for each other, although they do not know quite why they have to make the hunt or why they recognize each other when it ends; and, at the close, they die to be together forever, free of the limitations of the flesh.

Miss Cram has handled this fragile story with great skill, and her little book has a wistful beauty which is extremely moving.

Knopf is publishing it for $1.

Menace of Liberal Ideas Held to Be Exaggerated

About this business of "liberalism" in the schools, just what is it all about? Those of us who have been out for some time are a bit puzzled. And, too, there is another matter that puzzles us. This concerns the right of people to use school buildings as public forums to blow off any surplus of ideas and sometimes very hot air that has accumulated from overheated thoughts. Quite often just to put on a show.

Oh, yes, and the third question before the house is just what teachers are supposed to suppress in their expounding. Are they to do lip service to text books only, or be permitted to say, "I think this and thus" to a class now and then, and perhaps explain why they think so?

All we greenhorns can do is to try to get a picture; when worked out to three parts of the puzzle in a way fit together to make a whole. It strongly resembles the old lithograph that hung in the hall, called the "Spirit of '76." The artist would likely depict that same spirit by a writer, a speaker, and a teacher—or student. The spirit of '35, however, better than bloody bandages and the shadow of guns.

Change Called Radicalism
What seems to have happened is that we interpret any change or any progress as communism, as fascism, or terrorist fanaticism. We are afraid of the bogey man.

Perhaps I am wrong, but others may be thinking it too—that you can't stop educated people from expressing themselves (and we are educated) and it doesn't matter terribly where or when they express it, or how, provided there is nothing actually subversive to the Constitution in the expression. It's a pretty swell old Constitution, and it's done pretty well by us.

Young Radicals Always Here
Matters have to be hushed over. People have to talk. It's their ego mostly shouting for a hearing. The store at Jimson's Corners, the back fence, the Sewing Society, the teacher's bar, and the nineteenth hole have always been miniature forums. What we are afraid of is that they'll gang up on us. We're instinctively afraid of big open meetings. And oh, how we fear the students.

As for the college youths, as long as I remember, we've had the college radical. The situation is touchy today, of course, and I believe some of the schools do need a weed-puller. But why take the attitude that all progress is dangerous radicalism?

Looking up my history I find the United States has had in all about fifty political parties, most of which died almost at birth. Some progressive, some reactionary, but out of it all came Progress.

It seems unnecessary to worry so much. Every liberal and every progressive is not a Communist. Every one with an original idea is not a traitor.

Harrison submitted to the president the proposal for extending NRA for eight months with price-fixing eliminated and codes confined purely to interstate commerce.

Richberg Protests
President Roosevelt, it was said, seemed disposed to agree until Richberg protested and argued not only that the law should be extended for a definite period, but that Congress should provide a definition of interstate commerce to include business "materially affecting" as well as directly involved in interstate commerce.

Miss Perkins took little part in the conference except to suggest the possibility of voluntary codes for interstate commerce.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Beauty By the Case

A makeup box is one of the most useful things a girl can have at home in the office or on a trip. Large, complete ones for the boudoir contain everything that is needed to keep your skin in good condition. Smaller varieties that fit into the drawer of a desk are equipped with medium-sized jars of makeup you need when you get ready to leave the office or for a luncheon or tea date.

In addition, there are really de luxe travel kits that make the perfect present for one who is going on a vacation. Looking for all the world like miniature overnight cases, these are divided into compartments that contain cleansing, tissue and foundation creams; all kinds of cosmetics, including powder, rouge, lipstick, mascara and eye shadow; special preparations to suit your particular type of skin; comb, brush and manicure gadgets.

The better ones have handsome mirrors set right in their covers. When you open the lid, a little dressing table is before you. When you have finished your routine, simply close the lid and think your stars that you don't have to wrap each bottle separately and find a place for it somewhere in your luggage.

Of course, if you don't want to spend money on a ready-made box for use at home, there's no reason why you can't make your own. One girl whom I know got a large wooden box about five inches high from a wholesale cheese company, bought several unpainted cutlery trays from a ten-cent store and wedged them into the large box. Then she painted the inside of it, covered the outside with pretty wall paper and placed it in the top drawer of her dressing table. Now you may be sure, she has a place for every beauty item. Rouge never gets mixed up with powder, cleansing tissues stay fresh and clean. The top of her dressing table always is neat and tidy.

NEXT: Spring makeup colors.

Sympathy
The town clerk of a small town in Scotland had the misfortune to lose his leg in a railway accident. As a mark of appreciation of his long service, the council provided him with an artificial limb. A few months afterwards the same official was unfortunately enough to have his other leg fractured in a tray-accident.

The mishap was naturally the topic of much discussion in the little town, and one old man was heard to remark: "It's a gay bad business for the poor man, but it is his leg or his leg that belongs to the town that's broken!"—Passing Show (London).

What if the critic couldn't do as well himself? You can be a good judge of mules without being a mule.

Last Stand

The father was reading the school-report which had just been handed to him by his hopeful son. His brow was wrinkled as he read: "English, poor; French, weak; mathematics, fair"; and he gave a glance of disgust at the quaking lad. The Pat Cleburne chapter, U. D. C., will hold their May meeting at 3 o'clock, Thursday afternoon at the Old State House in Washington. Dr. P. B. Carrigan, Mrs. Travis Holt, and others will speak of the early days of Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Johnson have as house guest, Mrs. E. J. Cowden of Little Rock.

On Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. L. W. Young on South Hervey street, the Clara Lowthorp chapter, C. of C., entertained at a very delightful and a very successful benefit bridge. For the occasion, the entire lower floor of the Young home was beautifully decorated with quantities of gracefully arranged pink roses and blue carnations. The chapter members attractively groomed in afternoon and evening frocks received their guests and distributed accessories for the tables of contract. Miss Marguerite Taylor was hostess at three tables for the younger set on the sun porch up stairs, which was prettily decorated with cut flowers and potted plants. Air Liner Crosses Nation in 11 Hours

Transcontinental & Western Establishes New Flight Record

NEW YORK.—(AP)—As clean and trim looking as the day it came out of the factory, a big twin-motored passenger plane flew in from the West Coast at sundown Tuesday night to establish a new transcontinental transport record of 11 hours and five minutes.

Despite dust and snow storms which forced a 20-minute detour at one point, the 14-passenger Transcontinental and Western air liner, making an unheralded experimental flight, clipped 29 minutes off the record set by Leland Andrews in an American Airlines plane on February 21.

"I think this flight proves that non-stop commercial flights are very practical," said D. W. (Tooy) Tomlinson, who was at the controls when the ship landed at Floyd Bennett Field, Tomlinson, former member of the famous navy acrobatic team, the Sea Hawks, was accompanied by Hal Sneed, authority on radio beam flying, and Pete Redpath, navigation expert. The plane left Los Angeles unannounced at 7:45 a. m. Eastern standard time, and was clocked in at 6:59 p. m.

Tomlinson said the ship was held to its course by an automatic pilot 80 per cent of the time between the two coasts. He looked "fresh as a daisy," field observers said, when he stepped out of the cabin with an exclamation of surprise at finding a crowd of 250 awaiting him.

Baptism of Holy Ghost, Is Theme

Miss Lewis Points to Biblical Manifestations of Spirit's Power

The children's choir and special instrumental music are adding quite a little to the revival at the Tabernacle. The Children's choir will sing again next Friday night. Their choruses were well rendered and appreciated Tuesday night.

Miss Georgia Lewis spoke on "The Baptism of the Holy Spirit" Acts 1:4-8 being the text. She said, "I speak from this subject tonight first, because I believe it to be the word of God, and second because I have received the blessed Baptism of the Holy Ghost myself. The Holy Ghost is more than an influence. He is a personality, the third Person of the Trinity who comes into our lives to dwell. We have a right to claim this blessing tonight because Jesus promised us the Comforter, and He sits on the right hand of the Father to intercede for us."

"Lots of things have happened that have brought reproach on this truth of God. Many have dragged it in the dust and put Christ to an open shame. In every movement things happen that the true Christians are ashamed of, but cannot help. I am here to hold Him up."

"We find the Baptism of the Holy Ghost to be a definite experience separate from the new birth. Some do not believe this way and the Lord bless them. If you are covered by the blood you are our brethren. Only in the book of Acts do we find the outpouring of the Holy Ghost recorded."

"Some peculiar manifestations accompanied the Baptism of the Holy Ghost. Some were accused of being drunk with new wine. One of the principal effects of the outpouring was that they were filled with power, and boldness to proclaim the gospel. Surely with power and boldness to preach the gospel. Surely the church needs an endowment of power today. We believe that the initial evidence of the Baptism is speaking with other tongues. It was this phenomenon convinced Peter at the House of Cornelius that God had granted salvation to the gentiles, and he said 'Who was I that I should withstand God?' On the day of Pentecost devout men from many countries were in Jerusalem and marvelled that they each one heard the message in their own tongue as the newly Baptized Christians spoke in new tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance. At present some 20 years later the same manifestation accompanied the Baptism of the Holy Spirit. Many today are like those at Ephesus and have not so much as heard that there be any Holy Ghost. When Paul was baptized with the Holy Spirit and also when the Holy Spirit was given at Samaria the record does not say that they did or did not speak with other tongues."

"In writing to the Corinthian church trying to correct abuses that had crept into their worship he said, 'I thank God that I speak with tongues more than ye all.' Nowhere in the Bible does it say that this or that manifestation is the evidence of the Baptism of the Holy Spirit, but we take the circumstantial evidence. Peter is circulating his sermon on the day of Pentecost said 'The promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.' Why should we not expect the same manifestation to accompany the experience today that did in the early church. Speaking in tongues is not the Baptism, but the evidence of it. People should not seek to speak with other tongues, but to be Baptized with the Holy Ghost. Friend, have you received the Holy Ghost since you believed?"

Processing Tax Hit by Textile Labor

Workers Line Up Behind Mill Owners in War on Agriculture

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Textile labor, which six months ago engaged in a bitter general strike, threw its weight behind the campaign of cotton mill owners Tuesday to force a substitute for the cotton processing tax and to obtain protection against foreign imports.

Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers, was a member of the Rhode Island group which appeared before the special cabinet committee studying the textile situation.

Governor Green and two manufacturers—Harry H. Cotton, general manager of the Lonsdale Company, and Lawrence E. Richmond of the Crompton and Knowles Company of Providence—also testified.

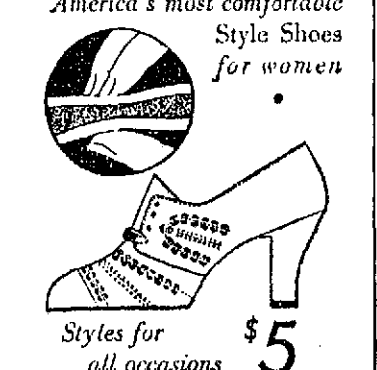

Meanwhile the textile situation figured in the discussion of New England Republicans who met in Boston Tuesday. Col. Theodore Roosevelt asserted in his keynote address that the textile controversy was "a typical illustration of the effect of the administration's economic policies," and, after referring to the menace of Japanese imports, declared:

"I want a shave," said the disgruntled Sergeant as he climbed into the barber's chair. "No haircut, no shampoo, no rum, whitehazel, hair-tonic, hot towels or face-massage. I don't want the manicurist to hold my hand, nor the bootblack to handle my feet. I don't want to be brushed off, and I'll put on my coat myself. I just want a plain shave, with no trimmings. Understand that?"
"Yes, sir," said the barber quietly.
